BELLA LIU FALL 2026

Client: Plainform
Product/Service: Eco-Friendly Fashion Creative Brief
Brand Campaign Name: "Make Sustainability Yours"
Campaign Timeline: Spring/Summer 2029

INTRODUCTION

“Live like you are alive” is a Lululemon brand campaign launched across London and Germany, where it can be found on the wall beside the sidewalk or on the wall of a commercial area.
Rather than focusing on advertising a specific product, the campaign uses energetic movement and bold visual design to convey a vibrant lifestyle. According to BUILDHOLLYWOOD, the campaign aims to inspire people who walk by the poster to embrace freedom, joy, and playfulness in their everyday lives and experience all these in their favorite activewear, which, in this case, is the Lululemon activewear.

The goal of the campaign:

1. Enhance the brand identity

Create a stronger and more distinctive brand identity by connecting the brand with energy, freedom, and an active lifestyle.

2. Build emotional connection

Build emotional connections with the target audience by showing joyful, vibrant, and relatable moments rather than performative images, making the brand feel more authentic and thus strengthening customer loyalty to the brand.

3. Increase brand awareness and attract more consumers

Through global-scale campaign exposure, more consumers get to know Lululemon for the first time and are encouraged to explore and try the brand’s products

Strong brand recognition: the large Lululemon logo and brand name on the left side make the brand recognizable

Both models wear highly saturated pink clothes that echo the pink background on the right side of the poster, creating visual consistency while making the two figures stand out. Moreover, their body positions create a strong visual focus and communicate energy and playfulness.

The light blue and grey background behind the models prevents the image from competing with the highly saturated pink, which creates a more balanced color palette and achieves a sense of harmony.

Clear visual hierarchy of text: The slogan is oversized and uses all uppercase letters; the color white is very distinct on the background, which can catch passersby's eyes at first glance and can be processed quickly.

The saturated pink background creates a sense of contrast and can immediately attract the attention of people who pass by, while creating an energetic and playful vibe.

"Made to feel" presents as a supplemental brand message, reemphasizing the campaign's point on emotional experience rather than just the product advertisement. The small size prevents it from competing with the main slogan.

CONTENT ANALYSIS

The activewear is not displayed as a single, directly promoted product, but is incorporated into the model's activities as they are wearing it while taking this photo, which emphasizes the focus on what it looks and feels like living a Lululemon lifestyle instead of just wearing the products

Rather than featuring professional athletes or celebrities, the campaign showcases people who enjoy playful and spontaneous movement, making the brand feel more relatable and approachable for customers

The interaction between the male and female models presents the movement as a shared social experience, creating a sense of connection and bonding

The focus of this campaign is to connect Lululemon with a broader lifestyle centered on energy, an active lifestyle, and movement rather than on a specific product.

The poster overall does not provide the audience with information about the shopping link, price, sales, or product features. So its functionality might be to tell people what the brand is and what values they want to convey at the starting point rather than persuade people to buy its product, although this could be a potential further purpose.

Take-away message: Lululemon aims to represent more than its activewear--it symbolizes an energetic, vibrant, and fulfilling way of living.

PLACEMENT ANALYSIS-- WHY IT WORKS

1. Strong visual impact: the highly saturated colors create a strong visual impact and can immediately catch the attention of people passing by, whether they are driving, cycling, or walking.
2. Outdoor placement may naturally reach audiences who already have active lifestyles, such as runners, cyclists, or people taking a walk around the area; thus, the campaign might be particularly relevant and effective for them.

3. Urban environment: placing the poster in urban areas, especially near shopping districts, may increase exposure to people with stronger purchasing power, which is crucial for Lululemon as it’s a premium activewear brand with relatively pricey products.
4. Repeated exposure: people who regularly commute or exercise along the same route may encounter the poster frequently; the audience might develop curiosity about the brand and would like to learn more about the brand.

PLACEMENT ANALYSIS-- LIMITATIONS

1. Short exposure time: people who pass by may only have a few seconds to view the poster, so they may miss important information or fail to remember what the brand does.
2. The poster provides almost no information about prices or product benefits. However, some consumers may prefer to take a glimpse at these details before exploring the brand further and purchasing its products.
3. Lack of next-step instructions: there is no QR code or official website link, which might cause additional time and effort for people who become interested in this brand, as they need to manually search for the brand afterward, thus discouraging their engagement.
4. Compared with digital advertising, physical ads can only reach people who pass through a specific location. Digital ads can reach far more audiences and repeatedly appear across people’s daily media platforms.

RECOMMENDATION

1. Add a clear Call-To-Action section: the poster creates a strong emotional impression and clear brand images but does not provide the audience with clear next-step instructions, which is really important for the audience to actually purchase the products. Adding a small QR code or a sentence like “Visit us on lululemon.com” could make it more accessible for consumers who are interested in learning more about the brand and its products without ruining the original poster design and style.
2. Present more product information: The campaign focuses primarily on promoting a lifestyle and emotional connection, but provides little information about the products that the models are wearing, which could be confusing for people who search the brand for the specific products that the models wear. Thus, adding product-related information might be helpful, like a sentence such as “The model is wearing our define jacket.”
3. The campaign could feature models from a wider range of age groups, such as middle-aged adults, which could help broaden the campaign’s appeal and make the brand more inclusive.

DATA COLLECTION

Quantitative experiment

- Group A: original poster with no CTA
- Group B: same poster with CTA instructions like a QR code and Lululemon's official instagram
- After viewing the ad for the same amount of time, the participants should complete a survey measuring their responses regarding the likelihood of visiting the Lululemon website or store, their purchase intention, emotional response to the ad, and interest in learning more about the products
- The average score between the two groups can be compared to determine whether adding a CTA is an effective strategy to increase consumers' engagement and purchase intention.

DATA COLLECTION

Qualitative data

- To collect data about people's impressions and perceptions of the brand or the ad in general
- Interviews: conduct interviews with people who are potentially Lululemon's target audience to understand their overall perception of the poster, their impression of the brand, and whether the campaign slogan resonated with their values;
- Surveys: distribute surveys to existing customers and people who are less familiar with the brand, which can help determine whether the poster successfully attracts new customers and communicates its value.
- Sample questions: What do you think of this advertisement? Does this ad reflect a lifestyle that you resonated with or aspire to have? Has this advertisement changed your impression of the brand? Is there anything that you think the brand can add to this ad? What's missing?
- Analysis& Applications: Results can be categorized into various themes such as brand review, lifestyle identification, and missing information. The findings can help the brand identify which parts of the campaign poster resonated most with consumers and guide future improvements to the content and layout.
